A Woman in the Polar Night by Christiane Ritter For most of us, the Arctic conjures up images of freezing and forsaken solitude. Hence, Austrian painter Christiane Ritter was at best ambivalent when her husband asked her to join him on the small Arctic island of Spitsbergen in a tarpaulin-covered hut sixty miles from the nearest neighbor. A Woman in the Polar Night is an astounding memoir by Austrian artist Christiane Ritter who, in , joined her scientist and hunter-trapper husband, Hermann, on the remote island of Spitsbergen miles off the coast of Norway. She wrote A Woman in the Polar Night her only book after her return to Austria in (her husband stayed on in the Arctic for several more years). It was a bestseller for many years in Europe, and the.
