Winning against the King's Indian A review. Mihail Marin offers a White repertoire against the ever popular King's Indian Defence and recommends the main line. The King's Indian Attack (or KIA), also known as the Barcza System (after Gedeon Barcza), is a chess opening system for White. The opening is not a series of specific moves, but rather a system that can be played from many different move orders. In the classical system of the King's Indian White develops naturally and refrains from chasing ghosts looking for a refutation of Black's set-up.

Mihail Marin's Winning against the King's Indian 11/24/ – Mihail Marin is considered one of the premier opening theorists and treats all his topics with great care and thoroughness. Hannes Langrock has watched his DVD on the main variation of the King's Indian Defense. It is ironic that a player who invented "Fischer Random Chess" and bemoaned the ever-increasing amount of theory would be the same who was the biggest (until that time) specialist in certain openings, and the most dedicated and hardest worker on opening theory. Simon's weapon of choice: the King's Indian Defense, a favorite of both Bobby Fischer and Garry Kasparov. We get the typical blocked center of the King's Indian Defense with White pawns on e4 and d5 holding back the Black d6 and e5 pawns. Victor Bologan: Winning with the King's Indian Attack I have always loved the King's Indian. My trainers, Ion Solonar and Vyacheslav Chebanenco, taught me to play it with Black, and also showed me how play the King's Indian set-up with an extra tempo.
